The Camel Fair

Every year, in the month of November, a small town in Rajasthan fills with colour and noise. This is the Pushkar Fair. Thousands of camels are brought here by herders from distant villages. The camels are washed, and their coats are trimmed in pretty patterns. Some wear bright blankets and silver anklets. Children ride on carts, and women sell bangles and bags in the sandy lanes. In the evening, folk singers sit around fires and sing old songs. Many tourists come from other countries to watch the camel races and the turban-tying contest. Farmers also come to buy and sell animals. Although the fair lasts only a few days, people wait for it all year, because it brings together friends, families and traders from all over the land.

(i) In which month is the Pushkar Fair held? 2

Ans. In November.
