Tara's Library Card

Tara was ten years old and loved stories, but her family could not afford to buy many books. One day, her teacher told the class that the town library gave free membership cards to children. Tara hurried there after school and filled in a small form. The librarian, Mr Joshi, gave her a blue card and showed her the children's section. Tara chose a book about a clever fox and read it in two days. She took good care of it and returned it on time. Soon she was reading one book every week. She even began telling the stories to her little brother at bedtime. Months later, Tara wrote a short story of her own, and it was printed in the school magazine. She was proud that her library card had opened a door to a whole new world.
