15. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. [5]

Dadaji's First Video Call

My grandfather, Dadaji, lives in a village near Sikar. He had never seen a smartphone until last year. When my father gave him one, he held it carefully, as if it were made of glass. I taught him to touch the green button and see his family on the screen. On Diwali, my aunt in Mumbai called him on video. Dadaji saw her face and the lit lamps behind her, and he laughed with joy. "It is like she is sitting in my room," he said. Now he video calls us every evening and shows us his cows. Technology can bring faraway people close, but it must be used wisely. That is why my mother allows us only one hour a day on the phone, and Dadaji says, "Even a good friend must not be allowed to stay too long."

(i) Where does Dadaji live, and what had he never seen until last year? 2

(ii) How did Dadaji hold the phone when he first got it? Why? 2

(iii) Find a word from the passage that means far away. 1

16. [5]

(i) Who called Dadaji on Diwali, and what did he see? 2

(ii) What did Dadaji say about the video call? 2

(iii) Write the word from the passage that is opposite in meaning to carelessly. 1

17. [5]

(i) What does Dadaji do every evening now? 2

(ii) Why does the writer's mother allow only one hour a day on the phone? 2

(iii) Write the plural form of family. 1

18. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. [5]

The Marigold's Wish

A marigold grew in the corner of a big garden, between a rosebush and a jasmine creeper. Every morning she saw people stop to smell the roses and say, "How lovely!" Nobody looked at her. "I wish I were a rose," she sighed. One day, an old gardener named Hari Kaka came with a basket. He plucked the marigold's golden flowers one by one. "Tomorrow is Dussehra," he said, "and these flowers will make garlands for the temple and for the doors of the houses." The next morning, the marigold looked at the garden. The roses stood alone on their stems, but the whole town was smiling under her golden garlands. A little bee whispered to her, "Every flower has a special work. Do not wish to be someone else." From that day, the marigold was happy with her own colour and her own fragrance.

(i) Where did the marigold grow in the garden? 2

(ii) What did the marigold wish, and why? 2

(iii) Find a word from the passage that means made a long, sad breath. 1
