The Camel Fair

Every year, in the month of November, a small town in Rajasthan fills with colour and noise. This is the Pushkar Fair. Thousands of camels are brought here by herders from distant villages. The camels are washed, and their coats are trimmed in pretty patterns. Some wear bright blankets and silver anklets. Children ride on carts, and women sell bangles and bags in the sandy lanes. In the evening, folk singers sit around fires and sing old songs. Many tourists come from other countries to watch the camel races and the turban-tying contest. Farmers also come to buy and sell animals. Although the fair lasts only a few days, people wait for it all year, because it brings together friends, families and traders from all over the land.

(i) In which month is the Pushkar Fair held? 2

Meena and the Green Purse

One rainy afternoon, Meena was walking home from school when she saw a small green purse lying in a puddle. She picked it up and opened it. Inside were three hundred rupees and a photo of an old man. Meena did not keep the money. She knew that somebody must be worried about it. Next morning, she showed the purse to her teacher, Mrs Verma. The teacher announced it in the assembly. Soon, an old watchman named Ramu Kaka came running to the stage. He had lost the purse while hurrying to the market. His eyes filled with tears of joy as he took it back. He thanked Meena again and again and blessed her. The whole school clapped for her. Meena smiled shyly. She learnt that being honest makes one feel proud and light-hearted.
