Our Moon

The Moon is the Earth's only natural satellite. It moves around the Earth once in about twenty-seven days, and at the same time it travels with the Earth around the Sun. The Moon is smaller than the Earth: about forty-nine Moons could fit inside our planet.

The Moon has no light of its own. It shines because it reflects the light of the Sun. As it moves around the Earth, we see different parts of its bright side, and so the Moon seems to change shape from a thin curve to a full round disc and back again. These shapes are called the phases of the Moon. The night when the whole face is visible is called Purnima, and the night when it cannot be seen is called Amavasya.

In 1969 two astronauts, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin, became the first humans to walk on the Moon. They found no air, no water and no wind there. Their footprints will remain for millions of years. In 2023 India's Chandrayaan-3 landed near the Moon's south pole, and India became the fourth country to land a spacecraft there.

Market Morning

Early in the morning, when the town is half asleep,
The sellers spread their baskets in a bright and busy heap:
Mangoes gold as sunshine, peas as green as grass,
Red tomatoes shining like small lanterns made of glass.

The flower girl is smiling with marigolds in rows,
The bangle man goes jingling wherever he goes,
A knife-sharpener sits humming beside his turning wheel,
And the whole street fills with voices, with laughter and with zeal.

I hold my mother's finger and carry the cloth bag,
I count the coins in my pocket, I watch the crowd go by,
A rainbow come to market beneath the morning sky,
And I love the market morning, so full of cheer and noise.
