2	12, Lal Kothi Jaipur 2 November 2026 The Editor The Daily Chronicle Jaipur Subject: Menace of plastic bags Sir/Madam, Through your newspaper I wish to draw attention to the growing use of plastic bags in our city. They choke drains, harm stray animals and spoil our parks. Shopkeepers hand them out freely and customers seldom object. I request the authorities to enforce the ban strictly and fine offenders. Citizens should carry cloth bags, and shops may offer paper bags at a small price. Schools can also run awareness drives. If we act together, our city can be clean again. Yours faithfully Ravi/Ravina (Format 1 · Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Language 1)	5

3	Say No to Plastic Good morning respected Principal, teachers and my dear friends. Today I wish to speak about a small thing that has become a big problem: plastic. Every day each of us uses a bag, a bottle or a wrapper that will remain on earth for hundreds of years. It blocks drains, harms animals and pollutes our soil and water. We cannot clean the world in a day, but we can begin with ourselves. Let us carry cloth bags, use steel bottles and refuse plastic cutlery. Let us persuade our families to do the same. Remember, a river is saved by every drop that is not polluted. If each of us changes a single habit, our school will become plastic-free by December. Thank you. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5

	OR: Why Reading Still Matters by Rahul/Rashmi, Class 9 In an age of videos and games, many young people ask why they should read at all. The answer is simple: reading is the only activity that makes us think while we enjoy. A video shows us a picture; a book makes us paint our own. Reading improves vocabulary, widens knowledge and strengthens concentration. It also teaches empathy, for while reading a story we live in another person's shoes. Students who read regularly write better and speak with confidence. The habit can begin with ten minutes a day. Choose a book you like, find a quiet corner and switch off the phone. Soon the pages will become friends. As someone has said, a reader lives a thousand lives before dying. Why not begin today? (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5
4	It was the morning of my first inter-school debate, and my hands were as cold as ice. I had prepared for two weeks, yet when I stood on the stage and looked at the rows of faces, every word vanished from my mind. For a moment there was silence. Then I remembered my teacher's advice: 'Take a breath and speak to one friendly face.' I found my friend Meera in the third row, and she smiled. I took a deep breath and began with a simple sentence. Slowly, the lines returned, and my voice grew steady. When I finished, the hall rang with applause. I did not win the first prize; I stood second. But that day I learnt that fear shrinks when we face it. Even now, whenever I am nervous, I recall that moment on the stage, and the memory gives me courage. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
	OR: The lights went out suddenly, and the whole building was silent. Sanjay, who was alone in the library finishing his project, froze. Outside the window the storm roared. He took out his phone, but the battery was dead. He felt his way along the shelves, remembering the way to the door. Halfway there he heard a soft sound behind him. His heart thumped. A tiny meow followed, and a small kitten jumped on his feet. Sanjay laughed in relief and picked her up. With the kitten in his arms, he reached the corridor, where the caretaker, Ramu Kaka, was coming with a lantern. 'Thank God you are safe,' said the old man. Sanjay told him about the kitten, and together they gave her warm milk in the staff room. The next morning the kitten was adopted by the class and named 'Torch'. Moral: courage grows when we think calmly in the dark. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
