2	9, Shanti Colony Jaipur 16 November 2026 The Editor The Rajasthan Herald Jaipur Subject: Children and mobile phones Sir/Madam, I wish to express my concern about the growing use of mobile phones among children. Many of them spend hours on games and videos, which affects their eyesight, sleep and studies. Some even neglect outdoor games. Parents should set time limits and encourage hobbies. Schools may also hold awareness workshops. I hope your newspaper will highlight the issue. Yours faithfully Jai/Jaya (Format 1 · Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Language 1)	5

3	Salute to the Teacher Respected Principal, teachers and friends. A teacher is the first light that shows us the way. She teaches us how to read, but also how to think. She corrects our mistakes without making us feel small, and she celebrates our success as if it were her own. When we are worried, her kind words are a comfort. When we are lazy, her firm voice becomes our alarm clock. Many of the great people in history—leaders, scientists and poets—have spoken warmly of their teachers. Teachers' Day is celebrated once a year, but our gratitude should be shown daily through respect, discipline and hard work. Let us promise that we shall make our teachers proud. Thank you. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5

	OR: The Phone in Our Pocket by Mayank/Muskaan, Class 9 The mobile phone is no longer just a device for calls. It is a camera, a map, a library and a bank. It helps us call an ambulance in an emergency and keeps families connected across the world. But when misused, it can be harmful. Students waste hours in games and videos; some are tempted to cheat or cyberbully. Long use of phones strains the eyes and affects sleep. Many accidents are caused by people using phones while driving. To make the best of this tool, we should set time limits, switch off notifications at night and use phones for learning. Phones should never replace conversation and play. A wise user controls the phone, and not the other way round. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5
4	It was in the winter break that my uncle took us to Mumbai. The first thing I wanted to see was the sea, and on the second day we went to Juhu beach. The moment I saw the endless blue water rolling toward the shore, I ran barefoot across the warm sand. Waves splashed on my feet and pulled the sand from beneath them, which tickled. My cousins and I built a sandcastle and decorated it with shells. A few metres away, children flew kites, and vendors sold bhelpuri and coconut water. In the evening, the sun dipped into the sea, and the sky blushed pink. We sat quietly and listened to the roar of the waves. As we returned home with sand in our pockets, I felt a strange peace. That day I understood why poets write so much about the sea. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
	OR: In a small village, there lived a farmer with four sons who quarrelled all the time. Each wanted to be the leader, and no one listened to the others. The farmer was troubled. One day he called his sons and gave them a bundle of sticks. 'Break it,' he said. Each son tried with all his strength, but the bundle did not break. Then the farmer untied the bundle and gave each son one stick. They broke them easily. 'You see,' said the farmer, 'when the sticks are together they are strong. When they are separate, anyone can break them. So it is with you. If you work as a team, no enemy can harm you.' The sons felt ashamed and promised never to fight again. From that day they cultivated the land together, and the farm became the most fertile in the village. Moral: Unity is strength. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
