3	The Pride of the Nation Good morning all. Our tricolour is not just a piece of cloth; it is the symbol of the sacrifices of thousands who dreamed of a free India. Saffron stands for courage and sacrifice, white for truth and peace and green for faith and prosperity. In the middle, the Ashoka Chakra reminds us that life must keep moving forward. Every national festival, from Republic Day to Independence Day, begins with hoisting the flag. We must hoist it with respect, never let it touch the ground and never use it for decoration in a disrespectful way. To honour the flag, we should serve our country honestly. A good student, a good citizen—this is the best salute. Jai Hind. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5

	OR: Play to Learn by Kabir/Kavya, Class 9 Sports are as important as studies. Games keep the body fit and the mind alert. A student who plays for an hour each day feels fresher and studies with greater interest. Sports also teach lessons that books cannot. In a team game, we learn cooperation and leadership. In a loss, we learn patience; in a win, humility. Discipline and punctuality grow naturally through regular practice. Many schools now give weightage to sports in admissions, and a sports career can lead to jobs, scholarships and fame. But even if one does not become a champion, the habit of exercise lasts for life. Let us make sports a part of our daily routine. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression/Style 1 · Accuracy 1)	5
4	During the Diwali holidays I visited my grandparents' village, where a fair was being held near the temple. On the way, we saw bullock carts carrying families dressed in bright clothes. The ground was full of colour. There were stalls selling glass bangles, clay toys and sweets. A potter was shaping a pot on a wheel, and children crowded around to watch. A folk singer with a one-string instrument sang about the brave deeds of heroes, and the crowd clapped in rhythm. My grandfather bought me a wooden top, and I played with it in the dust. At dusk, lamps were lit around the temple, and the whole field glowed like a sky full of stars. I realised that a village fair is not only about fun but also about people coming together. I returned to the city with happy memories and a heart full of simple joy. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
	OR: In a small village, a shepherd boy named Gopal looked after the sheep. Bored one afternoon, he shouted, 'Wolf! Wolf! Save me!' The villagers came running with sticks, but found no wolf. Gopal laughed at their worried faces. A few days later, he played the same trick, and again the villagers rushed to help and were angry when they found it was a joke. One evening a real wolf came. Gopal screamed, 'Wolf! Wolf! Please help!' But no one came, for they believed that he was lying once again. The wolf killed many sheep before running away. Gopal wept bitterly and told the villagers the truth. An old man put his hand on his shoulder and said, 'Nobody believes a liar even when he speaks the truth.' Gopal learnt his lesson and never lied again. Moral: Lies destroy trust. (Content 2 · Organisation 1 · Expression 2 · Accuracy 1)	6
