1. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. 10

If you were to look closely at the contents of an ordinary household dustbin, you would find that more than half of what is thrown away is wrapped, packed or carried in plastic. A biscuit packet, a carry bag, a straw, a toothbrush: each one is used for a few minutes and thrown away, yet will take hundreds of years to break down. It is a strange arrangement in which the useful life of a thing is a morning and its harmful life is a century.

Plastic is not the villain of the story. It is light, cheap and strong, and it has made medicines safer and food fresher. The harm arises from our habit of using it once and forgetting it. Rivers carry it to the sea; fish and birds mistake it for food; and in many cities, drains choked by plastic turn a heavy shower into a flood.

Some governments have tried banning carry bags, with mixed results. A ban works when there is a cheap alternative ready. In a town in Kerala, for example, women's groups began stitching cloth bags from old sarees and selling them at the vegetable market for a few rupees. The ban succeeded there because shoppers were given something better than a lecture.

What can an ordinary person do? Carry a cloth bag. Refuse a straw. Choose a steel bottle over a disposable one. Separate wet and dry waste so that recyclers can use what is useful. None of these acts will save the planet by itself. But a habit is a vote cast every day, and a million habits can change what the market decides to sell.
