SECTION — A (Reading Comprehension: Discursive Passage, 400–450 words) 10 Marks

Read the passage and answer the questions.

1. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. 10

A boy of fifteen, Imran, once spent his Sunday mornings teaching the children of a nearby construction site to read. He had no certificate to give them, no classroom to teach them in, only a few old picture books and a patch of shade under a neem tree. At the end of a year, eleven of those children could read a newspaper headline. 'I didn't do anything great,' he said. 'I only turned up.'

Those three words, 'only turned up', contain the whole secret of voluntary work. Most of us imagine that service to others needs money, time and special training. It needs something simpler: the habit of noticing that someone nearby needs help, and the decision to give a little of what we have. A student can give a hour of explaining a lesson. A retired teacher can give an evening of stories. A shopkeeper can give a corner of his shop for a book-box.

What Imran understood is that service does not begin with big plans. Many of us wait for the perfect moment, enough money or the right title before helping others. Yet the child who cannot read does not need an institution; she needs one patient person with a few hours. The beauty of such work is that it changes the giver as much as the receiver. Imran says that he became a more careful listener, a more patient brother and a more serious student after a year of those Sunday mornings.

Schools have begun to recognise this truth. Many now include service hours in their calendar, so that students may teach, plant trees or clean a lake. The aim is not to produce a reward-hunting crowd but to build the habit of noticing a need and answering it. A society grows kind not through speeches but through such small, regular acts.

Volunteering also helps the giver. Studies in several countries have found that people who volunteer regularly are happier, more confident and less lonely. In helping, they discover skills they did not know they had. Imran, for example, found that he could explain a difficult idea in the simplest words, a gift that later served him well in his own examinations.

It is true that good intentions are not enough. A volunteer must be reliable. A child who has been promised a lesson and finds no teacher waiting learns a sad lesson in place of the planned one. The true volunteer is therefore not the one who starts with a great show, but the one who keeps coming back, quietly, until the work is done.

2. Read the following notice and answer the questions that follow. 10

Inspired by stories such as Imran's, the Social Service League of a school decided to organise a weekend camp in a nearby settlement where many children go to work with their parents on construction sites. The League's teacher-in-charge asked the members to design a notice that would be short, clear and welcoming. The notice was put up on all the boards in the senior wing and also read out in the morning assembly.

The notice below was put up by the Social Service League of a school.

SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE — VOLUNTEERS WANTED

A weekend 'Teach and Share' camp for children of the Shanti Nagar basti.

Dates: Saturday and Sunday, 5–6 December 2026 | Time: 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon

Who can join: Students of Classes 9–12 | Number of places: 30

Tasks: Reading help, drawing, simple science experiments, games

Please bring: Water bottle, a notebook and one good story to tell.

Name to the Secretary, Aarti Verma (Class 11-B), by 28 November.

On the day of the announcement, thirty-six students gave their names, so the League had to hold a short interview to select the volunteers. Teachers were asked to recommend students who were patient with children. The selected volunteers will meet the Secretary on Thursday to plan their activities and to practise the stories they will tell.

(i) How long will the camp run each day? 1

(a) 4 hours (b) 6 hours (c) 2 hours (d) 3 hours

(ii) Who is the secretary of the League? 1
